PUTIN SIGNALS HE'S BACK IN BUSINESS

MOSCOW — President Vladimir Putin on Thursday signaled a return to the classic days of his presidency by presiding over a 4 1/2-hour news conference, which at times resembled a call-in show as reporters from the country's far-flung regions scrambled to pass personal messages to the head of state.

The president appeared comfortable and bullish, if at times haughty, when answering often unscripted questions from more than 60 journalists — and ignoring attempts by his spokesman Dmitry Peskov to end the performance after four hours had passed.

The marathon event for some 1,200 accredited reporters marked a return of an annual tradition during Putin's first two terms as president, though unlike then, it was held in the World Trade Center, in western Moscow, instead of the Kremlin.
